

Reflect on the reading process that we went through in class today. Focus not just on the content of the stories that we read, but on how we went about reading them, and how we interacted. Write or record your reflections on the following:

- What felt different or strange? Why?
- What realizations did you have?
- Did you learn something from another person in your group?
- What questions do you still have about this story?
- Could you retell this story more fairly now?
- How can the way you tell a story honor or dishonor another person?
- What does any of this have to do with being Christian?
